

PUBLIC

LEDGER

FIFTH YEAR.

MAYSVILLE, KY., TUESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1896.

ONE CENT.

LARGEST IN THE CITY.

Purely Business!

The columns of a newspaper represent a valuable property which can afford to give advertising "notices" free any more than a merchant can afford to give away his goods or stocks. A newspaper is a legitimate business, and its returns are its stock in trade, and advertisements should be paid for, not given, as what part of the paper they appear.

The Continued Calls

Upon THE LEADER for free notices have been received from persons who are forced to publish the following items:

For Notes of Supplies

Examinations, fees, or other public examinations where a fee is charged, and for every examination, fee, or other expense, etc., etc., THE LEADER will charge FIVE CENTS A LINE, and thereafter this will be the invariable rule. Thus, how ever.

Does Not Include

notices of Lodge meetings or Church services, which must not exceed ten lines.

Avoidance of Disputes.

Misunderstandings are impossible. THE LEADER will charge FIVE CENTS A LINE for the first insertion and FIVE CENTS A LINE for each subsequent insertion.

A customer orders a five-line local inserted in the paper. "The bill is $1.00," says the boykeeper. But he forgets to add, "for two months."—"The bill is $1.25." When he remembers, he is probably in an icy feeling. Now, to obviate all such difficulties, notices will be accepted hereafter. Let's have a definite agreement to the outcome, and the termination will be plain all around.

All matter for publication must be submitted in before 9 o'clock in the morning of each day.

Just as we go to press it is learned that the venerable father of Mr. Samuel B. Oldham died at his home on the Flemingsville pike.

The English press and public are now thoroughly convinced of the United States' fidelity to the Monroe Doctrine, and in consequence the tone of this most democratic of the Union Commanders. He mused with his staff, and at his table sat familiarly every member of his military household. The expenses of the mess, I was told, were divided among the various members, not in equal proportions, but according to the rank of the various members, and in a manner satisfactory to all. There was no show or parade in either furniture or equipage. Everything seemed to be for use and arranged to economize both space and attention. The crockery was scanty and of the plainest description, and the fare, though abundant in quantity, was of a quality that might be found on the table of any well-to-do workingman in the North. A chop, with a cup of coffee, served for breakfast; a bit of roast beef, with potatoes and hard tack, flanked by a dish of pork and greens, sufficed for the 5 o'clock dinner, which had neither dessert nor sauce. A cup of tea and a slice of bread and butter completed the fare for the day. The beds were merely camp cots, some of them without mattresses, and all of the visible toilet apparatus were a few tin wash-basins, a scanty supply of towels, a bit of looking glass and a horn comb.

I was told that when the General's headquarters were at Culpeper an officer attached to the Quartermaster's Department, who was stationed some half dozen miles away, desired to consult him on some business that he deemed of importance. The day was exceedingly rainy and the roads were knee deep in mud, and to avoid undue exposure to the weather, the officer—who was one of the old regime—with a full appreciation of the dignity of his rank ordered up a close carriage, and, as it was likely that he would come on before he could return, had the lamps trimmed and hung out on either side of the driver's seat. Then, with an escort of twelve cavalrymen, he set out for headquarters, happy in the thought that he was proof against the fast descending rain.
